Biography

ImAgInE IT- feature dancer on upcoming blockbuster movie Step Up 4, only months after being viewed by millions on Season 6 of MTV's America's Best Dance Crew 2011. This is the reality of Jean Carlos Lloret, better known as B-Boy Bebo. The third of five siblings, he was born in Aguadilla, Puerto Rico on June 24, 1986. Bebo was nurtured by a single mother, who relentlessly fanned the flames of his burning desire to master the art of dance. His mother's continued unwavering support over the last twelve years has been one of his most solid inspirations. His very love for dance was inherited from his eldest brother, as he vividly recalls the day he watched him dance and thought.... "ImAgInE if I could learn to do that!" That day was the cornerstone for his monumental career. Without access or financial means to receive formal training, Bebo danced in the streets on pieces of linoleum flooring. He mastered his signature stunts by practicing on old mattresses he came across abandoned in the violent poverty-stricken area he lived. Under the apprenticeship of his older brother, he aspired and achieved the reputation of being one of the best dancers in his field. Performing side-by-side with his brother, they triumphed over their competitors in nearly every dance competition entered. In 2005, after the duo won 1st place in the "ZERO Gravity 2 on 2 battle", Bebo was faced with one of his most challenging fears. His dedicated teacher, partner and brother announced he would no longer dance, as his growing family became his priority. Devastated by the news, Bebo questioned his own ability to continue without his mentor performing by his side. For a fleeting moment, his chances for a vibrant career in dance seemed to be bleak. Just as the eagle fledging, Bebo was now left to perfect his flying skills alone. Equipped with the knowledge and techniques he gained from his brother, words of encouragement and support resonating in his mind from family and most importantly, his own untainted passion and overwhelming love for dance, Bebo has soared to the heights he had only ImAgInEd.

As a direct result of his vibrant career, performing throughout the United States, he has appeared in countless newspaper articles and TIME Magazine, featured on local news in many cities and nationally syndicated TV Channels to include MTV and FOX. His expertise has allowed him to frequently perform and train others in France and Korea. Regularly competing in top break-dance competitions, he has earned over thirty trophies and plaques, of which most were accompanied with substantial endowments. Standing at 5'.0", he recalls his first trophy being his identical height. Bebo has enjoyed the experience of performing in the Boston Celtics half time show, as well as appearing on FOX T.V's popular "So You Think You Can Dance 2008". In face of all odds, he has never given up and worked tirelessly toward success. For him the journey has just begun, as his ultimate goal is to be the inspiration for dancers on an international scale. All of this, simply because a little boy ImAgInEd IT!
